

I value my long relationship with sonic.net because, being a local company, their high level expertise is always readily available to me. The future of the internet will require broadband connections, so it is essential that local companies such as sonic.net be guaranteed the continued ability to provide it. Therefore the FCC should continue to regulate broadband service and not grant requests for deregulation such as has been made by BellSouth.